Ans 2b - ~~Archaeological~~ ~~Architectural~~ ~~sources~~ Archaeological sources

(10/12) are very important for reconstruction of early Indian history. Indian history ^{started} long before 2 million year ago when 1st hominids found in India.

Archaeological
 Q) ~~Architectural~~ sources - these consist - numerous, inscriptions, pottery, things of daily use etc.

- Importance

- 1) they provide different stratigraphic history different cultures of one place.
- 2) Numerous provide social structure,
 religious and cultural outlook for eg.

 information and agrarian culture.

about the society of the time eg inscriptions provide different class.

Remarks

different religion etc.

4) Testaments figure found from characteristic, historical sources - major non-archaeological historical sources.

- In this way multiple information of society can withdrawn from archaeological texts as sources.

- Limitation

1) Although they provide 1st hand information but interpretation is always subjective

2) They are nothing but discarded elements of the society.

3) In case of India - due to humid climate many information cannot be withdrawn due to perishable product under humid environment.

5) Literary sources - They can be divided into secular, and religious text under Indian sources and foreign sources also

Remarks

on the other hand →

— Importance in the construction of social society

1) try provide direct information of society
eg. Rigneda society can describe as liberal progressive on the basis of Rigneda seminar.

2) information about different classes
can also be withdrawn.

3) condition of women structures, and classen condition also describe them — eg. Dharmendra provide different view for structure of women.

— Limitation

1) Indian society started 2 million year ago — It provide information only after 1500 BCE

2) Suffered from biasness of authors and last part.

3) Interpolation and extrapolation.

Remark

and clear

- 4) No information about economic and ~~and~~ social condition elsewhere only focus around elite and ruling class.
- 5) No information about clashes.
- 6) Mostly written for religious or other purpose so less significant for history.

- Conclusion - no sources are important

What the way forward for construction of history - but they suffer from many irregularities like subjective interpretation, misinterpretation, extrapolation etc.

2.1 - Kautilya was a great politician

② diplomat, a war thinker, and of dominant personality. His book Arthashastra

- deals with all the statecraft.

- Kautilya's approach

Remarks

It is not a problem of sources it is a problem of historians so it requires suggestion to historians (to way forward)

- 1) ~~He provided information~~ He wrote about ~~Chakravartin King~~
- 2) State Bureaucracy
- 3) Role of King
- 4) Military Formation.
- 5) Dharma.
- 6) Administration and officers.
- 7) Role of private advisors to the king.

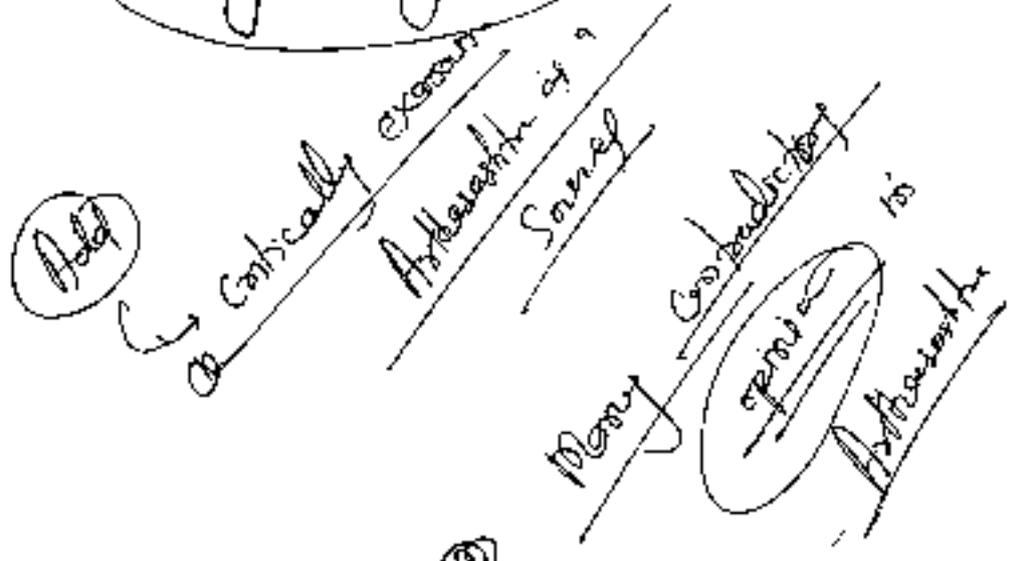

- In this song it seems to be linguistic thinking but there are certain clarity in it.

- i) He advised to control over society with robotic ~~and~~ precision.
- ii) His show is different from the drama of Ashoka - he did not follow moral and ethical class in his drama.
- iii) He provided over-emphasis of centralization.

- In this song - over-emphasis of centralization, robotic presentation in state court ~~and~~ not seem to be a pragmatic approach. But - the author provided a ideal state to be not the actual state - it means he tried to give state to system - and how it should be even.

- In this way his account should not be considered as ~~just~~ just or unpragmatic. It was a contingency BCE - not the modern age - so according to time his account is very pragmatic.
